Supervision Req

You will receive a briefing from a crewmember for every dive site. You are advised to ensure you are familiar with the following before commencing any dive at a particular site:

- Boundaries of the dive site
- Environmental conditions at the site, e.g. depth, terrain, currents, visibility and behavior of marine animals likely to be encountered
- Entry and exit points from the vessel
- Location and roles of supervisory staff, especially Dive Supervisor and Lookout

You are also reminded regarding the following about you diving practices:

- Regularly monitor air levels in air cylinders. The minimum for returning to the surface is 50 bar (or 750 psi)
- Always dive in buddy teams
- Never dive to depths greater than that to which you have been trained or have experience
- DIVING BEYOND 40 METRES DEPTH IS NOT ALLOWED FROM ANY DSDD VESSEL, PASSENGERS AND CREW INCLUDED
- You have a responsibility as a diver to dive safely and comply with the instructions of the crew

RECALL PROCEDURES

- The under water recall signal is: continuous banging on the side of the hull of the vessel
- This is an EMERGENCY signal and will not be used unless an emergency exists
- When the recall signal is heard, all divers are to surface cautiously as soon as possible, all the time being aware that the vessel may be moving. Ascent speed should not exceed 18 metres per minute, but safety stops should be omitted.
- Upon surfacing, return to the vessel as soon as possible, unless otherwise directed by the crew
- The surface recall signal is: whistle or ship's horn, with hand signal "come here"

DISTRESS AND RESCUE PROCEDURES

- Any diver in distress underwater, is advised to surface as soon as possible, preferably at a rate not exceeding 18 metres per minute
- If possible, the diver's buddy should be signalled before ascending
- If the diver has serious doubt about reaching the surface, they should drop their weightbelt and/or inflate their BCD
- Once on the surface, immediately establish positive buoyancy by inflating the BCD or dropping the weightbelt or both
- Once positively buoyant (floating) on the surface, signal for assistance by waving arms (distress signal), and/or taking one fin off and waving that towards boat and/or using the whistle to attract attention
- If all the above fails to get a response, or the vessel can not be seen, inflate the "safety sausage" and hold upright in the water
- If dusk or after dark, activate the chemical light stick provided
- Divers who are not in need of urgent or immediate assistance, but would like assistance back to the vessel, please raise one arm and hold this upright with a clenched fist
- To avoid "false rescues", all divers are requested to signal "O.K." back to the boat/lookout any time they arrive on the surface, or any time they are challenged for a signal by the lookout or crew

PLEASE advise the Dive Supervisor or snorkeling guide if you have any concerns about a medical condition

We also advise that you consider the following factors:

1. The risks to health and safety from a build-up and release of nitrogen in the blood and bodily tissues because of multiple dives in any 24 hour period; or because of a series of dives over a number of days with inadequate surface intervals to allow the nitrogen to off-gas
2. The risk to health and safety from nitrogen narcosis at depth and the need to move to shallower water if this occurs
3. The danger of maximum bottom time non-decompression diving
4. The risks of decompression diving
5. The need for safety stops
6. The risks associated with flying or altitude exposure after diving: The longer the period between diving and subsequent flying, the less likely it is that decompression illness will occur. After diving, you are advised to wait a minimum of 12 hours before flying in pressurized aircraft. Where divers have had multiple dives for several consecutive days or have made dives that require decompression stops, the minimum time before flying after diving should be extended to 24 hours
7. The effects of dehydration after diving
8. The risks associated with exertion after diving
9. The risks associated with diving while ill
10. You should remain aware of your own limitations and take these into account when diving
11. You should make use of the flotation devices that are available: wetsuits and flotation vests (BCD's)
12. If you cannot swim, or have any concerns about diving, you should discuss these with the Dive Supervisor
13. You should abstain from drinking alcohol prior to diving
14. You should manage the risks of sun exposure and hypothermia, through the use of clothing, sun screen, wet suits and covering up from the wind on leaving the water
15. A lookout wearing a brightly coloured shirt will be on duty at all times while diving and snorkelling is taking place and divers and snorkellers are advised to signal the lookout at any time if they require assistance
16. The vessel is equipped with a first aid kit, oxygen, and suitably qualified crew to carry out this treatment if required
17. A roll call will be conducted every time before the vessel departs any site
